Proposed Automatic Class Licence for Mixed Distributors of Video Games and Films

The Infocomm Media Development Authority ("IMDA") has proposed an automatic class licence for mixed distributors of video games and non-age restricted films. The Notice on Proposed Amendment to the Video Games Class Licence was issued on 11 April 2023, with representations from interested persons on the draft amendment received until 12 May 2023.

Since 2019, distributors of video games have been regulated under an automatic class licence regime which allows distributors to distribute or publicly exhibit appropriate or exempt video games. From July 2021, IMDA also introduced an automatic class licence regime to regulate distributors of non-age restricted films.

With the distributors of video games and distributors of non-age restricted films regulated separately under their respective class licences, IMDA proposes to also move persons who distribute both video games and non-age restricted films from individual licence to automatic class licence. This will be done through a variation of the Films (Class Licence for Video Games Distribution) Order 2019 ("Video Games Class Licence") to allow for the distribution of non-age restricted films.

IMDA has stated that there are no changes to the other conditions of Video Games Class Licence. The requirements for classification, and affixing of classification labels and consumer advice (where applicable) continue to apply. There is no licence fee or security deposit imposed on class licensees.
